

POLICY SECURITY

MyriadSea is committed to ensuring our ships are operated with proper regard to security. Effective security onboard keeps our people and ships safe, and is in line with our aim to ensure that everyone makes it home safely at the end of the voyage.

Security measures onboard will always be in line with relevant national and international regulations and requirements, including the ISPS International Ship and Port-Facility Security Code. Instructions and procedures related to security will also be prepared in line with these requirements.

As a company, we aim to do the following:

- Actively promote best security practices on our ships
- Identify and manage security risks in the operation of our ships
- Ensure our people have a high level of security awareness
- Ensure we are prepared to respond to any security incident
- Strive to continuously improve our security practices and procedures

We will take the following specific steps to implement these aims:

- We will implement a system of instructions and procedures for security, and will continuously monitor their effective implementation and relevance
- We will ensure that all our people are appropriately trained in security relevant topics
- We will actively promote security topics
- We will ensure that our people have the information they need to effectively manage security
- We will ensure that procedures are in place to manage security risk
- We will hold ourselves and our people accountable for security
- We will keep up to date with all relevant changes to rules, requirements or practices and will ensure that these changes are communicated to everyone onboard our ships

Everyone is responsible for security.

All our people are required to follow procedures and instructions designed to keep the ship secure, and to engage actively in improving security practices and awareness on our ships.
